History of Stained Glass

In Sussex itself, he not only undertook one of his earliest and most important commissions, the decoration of Cuckfield Church, but bought and magnificently restored an Elizabethan manor house, Old Place at Lindfield, which was to become his life-time home and his centre for entertaining friends, clients and fellow artists.

He wrote complaining he had not been paid. Charles Eamer Kempe was born in 1837, in Ovingdean on the edge of Brighton, and Sussex remained central to his life. It is the successor to St Leonard's parish magazine: copies from the late nineteenth century until 1939 do not survive, but there is a largely complete run from 1940 until 1965 in St Leonard's Church vestry.

Charles Eamer Kempe

As early as 1876, Edward recommended Kempe to his sister Princess Alice, Grand Duchess of Hesse, to provide glass for the ducal mausoleum at Darmstadt in memory of her two-year-old son Friedrich. They imitated the forms, medallion windows for the aisles and large figures for the clerestories.
