Introducing the Museum Project

Student curators can conduct front-end evaluations for their exhibit by asking their parents, other adults, or their peers about the museum topic or a specific focus area. .

Learn to See Like an Artist

More colleges should consider granting credit to students who agree to practice and use some of these techniques in an introductory course and see how well they work, he suggests. When we're in charge of our own learning, we often do find opportunities to engage our minds, especially in environments rich with evocative objects and experiences.
