Community and State in the Japanese Farm Village: Farm Tenancy Conciliation (1924

One conflagration in Edo in 1657 claimed 100,000 lives, and another 25,000 were lost in 1772. This no doubt helped shield the young regime when it called upon the military to suppress riots that erupted in Gifu after angry residents with nothing left to lose protested the dilatory response of the government. Only 10% of the 140,000 who died in the quake were crushed by falling structures.
