Jeff Wall

There is no sense of connection between the characters, whose position in the landscape appears incongruous.

Jeff Wall : Oeuvres 1990

Vancouver BC: Vancouver Art Gallery, 2009. I will look at why the image has attracted the kinds of readings it has and offer a number of frameworks through which we might make sense of its challenges, including film theory, modernist notions of surface and depth, the place of the mirror in the history of photography and the idea of the artwork as lesson or parable. He compared photographers' strong attraction to mirrors to a young child's compulsion to turn the sounds it hears into communication by repeating them ma-ma, da-da.
