Nova Scotia Department of Mines Annual Report: 1871

Larore beds of bog iron are found in various parts of the region underlaid by the gold bearing rocks, but hitherto they have not been turned to use. As the beginner is apt to mistake some minerals for others having the same appearance, a list is given of those looking somewhat alike especially when in small particles.

And while the costs are small the percentage of profit has been far greater than could ever be hoped for from any low grade large mine in Nova Scotia. He started out with a contract to bring the Royal Mails to Halifax beginning service in 1840. Though the beds of slate and whin curve downward over the folds and come to the surface in the next fold, we cannot expect the accompanying leads to do the same.
