The Abbey Theatre: Ireland's National Theatre: The First 100 Years by

Covers show very minor shelf wear. Today, theater-goers to both the Abbey and the Peacock can look forward to entertainment as dynamic and enriching as it has always been; and, while it must have been magical to sit in the old theatres and imagine a Synge or Shaw watching from the wings, there's still a sense of wonder when one realizes the magnitude of the gift we were given when the Irish National Theater Society was founded and the Abbey Theatre was born.

Abbey Theater

In In 1903 this became the Irish National Theatre Society, with which many leading figures of the Irish literary renaissance were closely associated.

The writers have been commissioned to write a monologue inspired by four questions: What do we want to be to one another? The history of this theatre is well documented, and its importance can be seen from the list of writers whose plays were first performed here in the early days of the 20th century. Russell, who had already offered the Fays his mythic play Deirdre, persuaded Yeats to offer them his patriotic play, Cathleen Ni Houlihan. From 1942 the began occasional productions in Irish; in time this led to a concentration on at the expense of longer and more serious work. Beckett was awarded for the Nobel Prize in 1969.
