Toward planning for the aging in local communities : an international perspective (Book, 1978) [styleguide.expo.io]

New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts have each established low-rental housing programs for the elderly, underwritten by state subsidy. Lopez AD, Mathers CD, Ezzati M, Jamison DT, Murray CJL, eds. While Europe currently has four people of working age for every older citizen, it will have only two workers per older citizen by 2050 as a result of the baby boom generation retiring and life expectancy increasing.

Why Population Aging Matters: A Global Perspective

Even if special housing for the aged is accepted as a valid undertaking, it is doubtful whether public and private industry can fully meet the total housing needs of older people, specially within the next decade. There is extensive debate about the relationship between increased life expectancy and disability status.

Next generation urban planning: Enabling sustainable development at the local level through voluntary local reviews (VLRs)

We have noted the dismay that some have expressed about this boom; they contend that good housing for the elderly is equally appropriate for other groups — the young, married couple or the bachelor — and therefore no preferential treatment should be afforded the aged.

Planning Aging

Figure 4, which is essentially an example for siting an old age home, shows, nonetheless, how a good proximate housing development for the elderly should relate to the surrounding area. Japan raised the pension age for men from 60 to 65 and for women from 57 to 65 in the past 15 years. On the state level, activity has been concentrated in a few Eastern states, although there are tangible signs of more widespread activity.

A prominent economic concern in our aging world is the shrinking of the workforce relative to the number of pensioners. It was considerably longer in much of Asia and Latin America, and it likely will be longer still in sub-Saharan Africa.

Transportation Research Part C: Emerging Technologies, 101:297-312. Today, more than 15 per cent of the total supply of public housing units are occupied by the elderly: in the mid-1950's, only 10 per cent were so occupied. Smith, RAND Corporation; Laura L.

Aging in Place Communities

Past population projections often underestimated decreases in mortality rates among the oldest old; therefore, the number of tomorrow's oldest old may be significantly higher than anticipated. To what extent should urban renewal account for older persons? There also are broader concerns related to young adult migration to urban areas, levels of intrafamily remittances, and return migration of adults after extended periods of employment in other countries.

But only 40 per cent of the elderly households in California could pay this rental. Chicago , IL : University of Chicago Press, 1999.
