For example, the negative case of the NSW state government versus local Balmain planning wars is discussed instead of positive models of consolidation. Arch by project programme and is impressive as a body of work gathered under the visionary direction of Leon van Schaik. Benefits of a universal access insurance program are outlined together with challenges associated with inequities in health status, geography, aging of the population, burgeoning technology, ideological diversity, and an economic climate requiring cost containment and favouring privatisation and the role of the market.
