Benito Mussolini

He left for Rome in a sleeping car, dressed in field uniform, and at the station a dozen or so hastily convened blackshirts covered in mud joined him. As the Italian Social Republic RSI had not existed in the South, and there thus had been no civil war, the southern MSI-supporters and notables were by contrast largely moderate-conservatives, less interested in ideology. Rossi Angelo Tasca , The Rise of Italian Fascism 1918-1922, New York: Howard Fertig, 1966, p.

Italian Communist Party

Cinemas were required to screen government propaganda in the form of newsreels. Pressure from Mussolini and his followers forced the government to order the internment of foreigners they considered enemies.

Benito Mussolini

Neither The Republicans, nor the Belgian party, wanted to form a group with the MSI over this issue. In October 1922, Mussolini threatened to march on Rome to take control of the government through violent force if it was not handed over. The Turin factory councils movement WHAT HAPPENED NEXT can only be understood in the context of earlier developments, particularly in the immediate post-war period.

Italian Socialist Party

This is based upon an internal document of the United Communist Party captured by the Department of Justice's Bureau of Investigation in the April 1921 raid on UCP National Headquarters in New York. The new party, which took with it half the MSI parliamentary representation and nearly all of its public finance, was however dissolved in the aftermath of the in 1979.

Benito Mussolini

This provides probably the best single analysis of the various factors that produced the particular configuration of class forces that enabled the fascists to take power, and of the tasks confronting revolutionaries once this had happened. But by then the fight was over. But the struggle was not isolated to Turin.

Benito Mussolini

Unity of action would have been preserved and in time the Maximalists could have been pulled out of the PSI. Nitti had strengthened the carabinieri and the police and formed a special body, the Royal Guards, 25,000 strong for the protection of the State. He was also left behind by the revolutionary wave that was sweeping the country.

In 1991, it was dissolved and re-launched as the PDS , which joined the and the.

Italian Communist Party

It meant that they could launch surprise attacks at will. The PCdI as conceived by the Left terminated. On one side, the Leninist preferred the single world party as it was internationalist and strongly centralized while on the other side the Italians wanted a party more tailored to their nation's peculiarities and more autonomy.
