Margaret Avison

She wrote most of her poetry in her spare time, and chose paying jobs which left her time to write. In 1978 she joined Toronto's Mustard Seed Mission as a secretary, and worked there until her retirement in 1986. They observed differences in responses between the two types of scenarios, participants were better at defending their judgement for the reasoning scenario than for the emotional intuition scenarios.

No one is harmed, the food isn't wasted, the siblings are happy, yet it's somehow still wrong. Capitol Building, ripped through layers of security, and.

The Dumbfounding

Participants were presented with a range of moral scenarios, some of which were offensive, but harmless; for example, cutting up a national flag Brazil or USA, matched to sample and using it to clean the bathroom; a family eating their dog after it was killed by a car; and, a brother and sister kissing each other on the mouth.

As such, Study 1 successfully replicated the findings of the original moral dumbfounding study. The updated critical slide contained a statement defending the behaviour and a question as to how the behaviour could be wrong e. Interestingly, however, when questioned afterwards, participants were only reliably able to articulate two of these principles a and c.
