Monitor introduced systems of assessing Foundation Trust performance, their governance, the provision of mandatory services and financial performance. Stereotaxic systems helped the surgeon to navigate safely through high-risk areas of the skull and brain, knowing exactly where the surgical instruments were. All patients had lived in the village between 1980 and 1991, and died between 1998 and 2000, providing some indication of the incubation period in their cases.

The outlook was improved by very early thrombolytic therapy if intracranial bleeding could be ruled out by an immediate CT scan.
