In 1902, the brothers began photographing people on mules heading down the Bright Angel Trail, the most popular trail at the canyon, as well as their own river adventures, landscapes and other dramatic scenes. How do you show people the immensity of Grand Canyon? Back at the canyon, the Kolb Brothers added a small theater to present their film to visitors. Ellsworth Leonardson Kolb December 27, 1876—January 9, 1960 and Emery Clifford Kolb February 15, 1881—December 11, 1976 operated the longest running photographic studio at the Grand Canyon, next to the classic El Tovar Lodge at the head of the Cameron Trail, later renamed the Bright Angel Trail.

The Kolb Brothers

For people who want to experience the grandeur of the river and the canyon at a more leisurely pace, Grand Canyon Expeditions offers the 14-day to 16-day Dory trips.

Many patrons purchase commercial rights to use Kolb Brothers' materials in other productions, while others simply marvel in the amazing imagery or take home a reproduction for personal or research use. Thanks in advance for your time and assistance. The Kolb brothers were bold and innovative, as they originally set up shop in a tent on a mining claim at the South Rim, developing their photos of mule riders in an old cave while using water from a muddy cow pond.
