Paul Island in the Pribilof Islands. In 1892 a school was opened among the Kake Indians of Kuiu and Kupreanof Island, under the auspices of the Oregon meeting, and in 1897 another mission, under the auspices of the California meeting, was established among the Eskimo in Kotzebue Sound. Countless hours would be spent as the men taught the boys hunting and survival skills, how to make weapons, and tools and the women taught the girls how to sew, prepare skins, cook, etc... At times the whole community would gather in the qasgiq while the elders would tell stories of their people and history.

Yupik Culture

About the time of the transfer to the United States the Christian natives numbered 12,000, served by 27 priests and deacons, with several schools, including a seminary at Sitka. Chapels had been established in every important settlement from Prince William Island to the outermost of the Aleutian Islands, a distance of 1,800 miles, besides other stations on the Yukon, Kuskokwim, and Nushagak Rivers, and regular churches at Sitka, Killisnoo, and Juneau. The fish were apt to spoil during the long journey from the Bering Sea to San Francisco where they were cured. The captain believed that all that was needed to assure Bethel's rapid development as a port was a survey of the bay.
