Descendants of Portuguese colonialists who lived in Malacca and are of mixed Portuguese, Dutch, British and Asian descent, are collectively known as the. Another piece of card is taped to the table next to the glass of water and says glas agu. The cultural theorist Ien Ang 2001 argued that while members of the Chinese diaspora who live outside mainland China may be ethnic Chinese by descent, in social settings there can be times when Westernized Chinese unwillingly consent to the politically imposed narrative of being Chinese.

Singapore Eurasians : memories and hopes / editor, Myrna Braga

From an auto-ethnographical perspective, as a Singaporean whose European ancestry is derived from a British-born paternal grandfather and a paternal grandmother of mixed European and Chinese heritage from Malaysia, the deepening maintenance of family connections with my Caucasian 'Others' second cousins with whom I share the same English great-grandparents during my extended periods of doctoral study and work in the United Kingdom engendered negative reactions from the relatives of my Singaporean Chinese mother.
