In essence, this pattern mainly supports Hypothesis 2. Empathy and complex task performance: Two routes to leadership. The moderator—mediator variable distinction in social psychological research: Conceptual, strategic, and statistical considerations.

Gender Differences in Leadership Styles and Behaviour

To do this, we first set up a simple expected utility model augmented with psychological costs related to social concerns. In the elementary school sample, the self-confidence tasks and the individual-group decision tasks were conducted on two separate days because of logistical constraints, while in the middle school sample all were done on the same day. An unfortunate consequence of this essentialist approach is that women are always associated with the inferior characteristic of the binary opposition: women are emotional, not rational, women are impulsive, not goal-directed, etc.
