SIGNED Civil War Battles of Appomattox Station & Court House, April 8

By 8 - 9 o'clock that evening, and after multiple charges, Sheridan's horsemen dispersed Walker's artillerists and Lee's much coveted rations and supplies were now in Federal hands. Despite this new threat, Lee apparently decided to try for Lynchburg anyway. To the Bitter End: Appomattox, Bennett Place, and the Surrenders of the Confederacy.

Five Things to Know: Appomattox and the Sesquicentennial of the Civil War

By holding the high ground west of Appomattox Court House they blocked the road General Lee intended to use and force his surrender the next day. Faced with no route of escape to Lynchburg, Lee agreed to negotiate terms of surrender.

Appomattox Campaign

George Armstrong Custer's Union cavalry, en route to Appomattox Station, clashed with the reserve artillery of the Confederate Third Corps, Army of Northern Virginia, under Colonel Lindsay Walker. If Union infantry were also ahead of them, they would need to reconsider their actions. Upon his II Corps being shelled when they approached the Confederate line, Humphreys attacked the Confederate position bringing on the Battle of Cumberland Church.
