The regrouped 201st Brigade attacked from the front and the 208th from behind, thereby putting great pressure on the Ugandan-Libyan-Palestinian force. Article IV Each Party recognizes that an armed attack in the Pacific Area on any of the Parties would be dangerous to its own peace and safety and declares that it would act to meet the common danger in accordance with its constitutional processes. Who Will Fight the Next War? In other words, the alliance has been 'threat insensitive'.

Civil

The last Tanzanian occupation troops left Uganda in October 1981. The hospitality of the local population undoubtedly made it easier for the fleet's officers to gain insight into Australia's strengths and weaknesses, and probably direct access to the information necessary to prepare plans to capture the new nation's major cities. Records of the Federal Convention of 1787.

The following 1987 White Paper, The Defence of Australia, did not go so far, but in a revealing sidelight on how key official documents were prepared at the time, reproduced almost verbatim the 1976 formula that there were 'grounds for confidence' that American military support would be made available in an emergency. For the military agent, if the likelihood that shirking will be detected by the civilian principal is high or if the perceived costs of being punished are too high, the likelihood of shirking is low. Museveni overthrew the Ugandan government in 1986 and became president.

ANZUS After Fifty Years

The unspecified action which would be taken by the United States to meet common danger under Article IV has been the subject of much interpretation by Australian governments, the defence bureaucracy, academics and analysts over the life of the alliance.

Civil

Australia and the United States welcomed the Indian and Pakistani moratoriums on further nuclear testing, and encouraged India and Pakistan to take steps to become part of the international nuclear non-proliferation regime.
