Angola

Over the course of three days, the atmosphere buzzed with new concepts and terminologies which forced open the mind to new possibilities. This paper raises a number of key issues concerning their prospects. Ideas like smart cities and industrialized entrepreneurship no longer seem like far-fetched terms, but like actual solutions to some of our social problems.

What development prospects for industrialisation in Africa?

The government has delivered on several key reforms since taking office in 2017, including the new law on Preventing and Combating Money Laundering, as well as the privatization law, the setup of a one-stop window for investors to improve the business climate, and the establishment of a social protection registry to protect the most vulnerable from the reforms. Policy actions should include measures to improve both the quantity and the quality of education and align education policy with labor market needs. The IMF did not specify if the reforms would include human rights and rule of law.

Angola

Until that happens, it will take a while. All of the discussions contained a wealth of technological genius and possibilities which debated the future of an opportunistic, entrepreneurial Africa. To address these social problems, speakers across the entire spectrum of the conference, noted their concern regarding the inclusion of the entire population into the digital world.

African Economic Outlook 2020: Developing Africa's workforce for the future

Of primary concern here is that the focus should be on creating a digital society which boosts both micro and macro economies within Africa.
