Current

Also, it seems that Korean Catholic women began practicing the Catholic notion of perpetual virginity on their own through self-learning. Yi Ik found that Catholic creeds indeed contained valuable philosophical claims to complement Neo-Confucian teachings. Zhou Wen-mo became the first Catholic missionary and priest for the Catholic Church in Korea Born in Suzhou of Jiangsu Province in 1752, Zhou Wen-mo was raised by his aunt after his parents died when he was very young.

Current

Women who were converted to Catholicism by Kang Wan-suk had regular gatherings on the seventh day of each month at her house and learned Catholicism from her and studied together. Second, it is possible to give a dispensation to a Catholic man, who wants to marry a pagan woman under these circumstances. Also, the addition of the word tong enabled the Jesuits to clearly transmit the meaning of Christian virginity, which was supposed to preserve the bodily purity of childhood.

She also confessed that she wore her hair up in a chignon, a symbol of married women, by her own decision. Nevertheless, overcoming the new restrictions imposed by the Church, Korean female virgins had successfully formed a new form of subjectivity to achieve self-realization by arduous practice of renunciation and resisting clerical control throughout the nineteenth century.
