But if he knows, or has grounds for believing, that the surety is being deceived or misled, or that he was induced to enter into the contract in ignorance of facts materially increasing the risk, of which he has knowledge and he has an opportunity before accepting his undertaking to inform him of such fact, good faith and fair dealing require that he should make such disclosure to him; and, if he accepts the contract without doing so, the surety may afterwards avoid it. But this is not North America, and it could be an attractive alternative to the radical Islamism seen in some other Arab States. I do know from my experience not only in these three clinics, but from my experience working at a public hospital in New Orleans, La.
