History Crash Course #54: The Reform Movement

But that doesn't make them people living up to responsibilities that G-d gave the Jews other religions don't have to follow Judaism of course, but reform Jews should follow authentic Torah true Judaism - as Jews are all one people. And yet we would make it the aim and scope of Judaism to be always 'in accordance with the times! Whether aware of it or not, almost every reader of this blog is, in part, indebted to him.

Orthodox Judaism therefore advocates a strict observance of the Jewish law, or , which is to be only according to traditional methods and in adherence to the continuum of received precedent through the ages. Apart from these, a third major component buttressing Orthodox practice and Jewish in general is local or familial custom.

Its progressive opponents often shared this view, regarding it as a fossilized remnant of the past and lending credit to their own rivals' ideology. But no member of this conference, the speaker concluded, would wish to link Judaism to a particular nation. But Hirsch developed the concept to embrace Western culture.
