The Greatest Traitor

See Phillips, Aymer de Valence, pp. This suggests the route out of the castle was planned by someone who knew the castle well: almost certainly someone who was on the inside who knew where Roger was imprisoned. Finally, if the Roger Mortimer referred to by the Trivet continuator was the lord of Wigmore, it would explain how Roger rejoined the court shortly after the battle, and much sooner than most of the other knights who were captured.

NOTES

Knighton records a Round Table tournament held by Roger at Bedford in 1328, probably drawing his information from Murimuth. Orpen, Ireland Under the Normans, iv, p.
