sociombibliog

Whenever people gather, they make choices—where to sit or stand; choices about who is perceived as friendly and who not, who is central to the group, who is rejected, who is isolated. GROUP: The Journal of the Eastern Group Psychotherapy Society, 33 4. Often, though, the conditioning is pervasive and strong enough to generate repression, so that a person can no longer get in touch with not only what he has avoided seeing, feeling, preferring, but also cannot recognize that he has ever avoided knowing these things.
