Introduction to the History of Philosophy by Hegel

The concept of individual that these democratic revolutions were embracing follows strongly the line of thinking established during the Enlightenment; it is based on a general idea of human dignity and does not lead to a narcissistic, egotistical worship of the self. As the material state strengthened the running away from the outside world into the inside world strengthened, too. Other works, such as Pragmatism and Sociology, a posthumous lecture series given late in his life, elaborate his views.

Has Physics Made Philosophy and Religion Obsolete?

Durkheim argues that the categories share the same properties as concepts. These developments should be continued, aided by philosophizing persons who are neither African nor of African descent, nor, even, professional academic philosophers, and continued as part of a larger, ongoing effort to appreciate and learn from the many life-enriching creations of all peoples as contributions to the treasure-houses of human civilization. The producers and carriers of the Renaissance were natives of the whole of the African Diaspora, across the Atlantic World especially, as well as from across the African continent, and they drew on the cultural and historical legacies of both and on those from other parts of the world for inspiration and content for their philosophizing artistic creativity in defining and giving expression to The New Negro.

The Birth and Emergence of Philosophy: How and Where Did Philosophy Emerge?

I don't think I argued that physics has definitively shown how something could come from nothing; physics has shown how plausible physical mechanisms might cause this to happen. Traditionally, the divine attributes have been identified as omnipotence, omniscience, perfect goodness, worthiness of worship, necessary of non-contingent existence, and eternity existing outside of time or atemporally.

Philosophy of religion

Thus, thinking negates the natural way of living. Similar views on cultural and economic assimilation were articulated by T.
