Desert Rain

Desertification is the process of productive cropland turning into non-productive, desert-like environments. As it approaches the tropics, the air descends and warms up again.

Desert Rain Landscape & Irrigation

Nanoclay keeps the sand moist, clumping it together and preventing it from blowing away. Desert Rain is a home being constructed in Bend, Oregon to satisfy the rigorous. Although temperatures outside varied greatly from day to night, temperatures inside did not.

Desert Rain Landscape & Irrigation

Water in the Desert Rain is usually the main source of water in a desert, but it falls very rarely. Desert dwellers have also adapted their shelters for the unique climate.
