A preliminary treaty between and the was signed in 1782, but the final agreement was not signed until September 3, 1783. Whereas the Preliminaries, signed at Fontainebleau the third of November of the last year, laid the foundation of the peace reestablished between us and our most dear and most beloved good Brother and Cousin the King of Spain, on the one part, and our most dear and most beloved good Brother the King of Great Britain, and our most dear and most beloved good Brother and Cousin the King of Portugal on the other, We have had nothing more at heart since that happy epoch, than to consolidate and strengthen in the most lasting manner, so salutary and so important a work, by a solemn and definitive treaty between Us and the said powers.
