Xian dai Sichuan wen xue de Ba Shu wen hua chan shi / Li Yi zhu

Undaunted by either tradition or long-standing popular opinion, Chunhan took the position pragmatically that Cao Cao was the best ruler for China because, more than imperial lineage, it was important that the ruler be capable of ruling in times of peace, as well as being a heroic leader in times of trouble. In the evolution of the traditional scholar into the twentieth-century intellectual, the line separating Wu Binyu and his son and their generational worlds was abrupt.
