Sprachskepsis und Poetologie

In Chapter 8 Eduard is now so fond of Otilie he lets her read over his shoulder, although when Charlotte did this in Chapter 4 he was outraged. The observation of the experiments themselves refers to experimental chemistry kits that were available on the market in the period described in the novel, 27 however, such kits never actually appear in the plot.

She only communicates in writing. This seems to be the primordial dialectic of alienation, which Fichte conceives of as a positive, autopoietic process, whereas Adorno inverts this dialectic, construing it as the negative, destructive force of human rationality. The narration switches into the present tense.
