However, this has not helped in achieving their main aim of reducing vehicles in the cbd. The Kenya-Uganda Railway emerged in the 1890s and had a profound impact on Kenyan society until it met with problems late in the twentieth century. The perspective of those mission leaders and their communities is not explored but Hill records competition between those different communities.

The Kenya

In 1895, the Maasai tribe and the British came to a brutal impasse.

The Uganda Railway at the beginning of 20th century.

A serious attempt was made to unify the East African Territories. Naturally, the growth of towns and cities led to an increase of economic power for the country, and thus a cycle of growth was fostered by the sound of a train horn. In 1948 KURH became part of the , which added the line from Kampala to in western Uganda in 1956.
