Philological Education in the USSR

In ten-year schools with instruction conducted in a language other than Russian, the weekly course load may be increased by two to three hours. In 1980 more than 99 percent of the eighth-grade graduates entered educational institutions providing a secondary education. In addition, the military and patriotic training of students was strengthened.

Philological Education in the USSR

This document reflected the achievements of the Soviet people in building a developed socialist society, as well as the tasks facing education at the time. Imagine what true lifelong learning could look like in a world in which we were free to develop our own courses of study and unlock the creative potential of humanity. He would always dress in a white suit so that he would stand out from the crowd.

Education in the U.S.S.R.

Instruction is organized according to syllabi and curricula established by the Ministry of Higher and Specialized Secondary Education of the USSR. Therefore, the first institutions of this kind appeared only a century later, under Emperor Peter the 1st. At the lower age classes the percentage figures for men and women for 1926 were much closer to each other than during the censuses of the previous years.

The Soviet Cult of Childhood

Free tuition and coeducational instruction were introduced.

Education in the Soviet Union on JSTOR

It is part of the life of most of the people. The Ivdel'sk secondary school gave 74 pupils to the industrial Kombinat technical school.

The division of Germany

School vacations take place between the quarters, in autumn, winter, spring, and summer. No sooner had the revolution succeeded than the young Soviet government was forced to fight on two military fronts: a civil war against the old powers just overthrown, and a battle against some dozen countries that sent their troops to defeat the revolution. They were either killed or imprisoned, which eventually led to death.
