Philosophy

The contention reflects three lines of evidence: most people, in most places, report being happy; most people report being satisfied with their lives; and most people experience more positive affect than negative. Stoic philosophy was founded by Zeno of Citium. His starting-point is an epistemological question: how does it come that we cannot help but experience objective reality the way we do, i.

Pragmatism

For the Protestant, the disagreement arises from a philosophy that is based on the accessibility of nature to man's rational powers, an accessibility that he is unwilling to admit. He was also seen as a key figure in the American romantic movement. This misconception, however, was refuted by the subsequent development of individual scientific disciplines.

A Treatise of Human Nature, by David Hume

Even when it seems to a scientist that he is solely relying on the logical apparatus of his own specialized field, he is actually utilizing the accumulated results of the cognitive activity of all mankind, fixed into philosophical categories.

The Natural Law Tradition in Ethics (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

In this way, Hegel defended the truth in Kantian dualism against reductive or eliminative programs like materialism and empiricism.

Introduction_To_Philosophy_Dallas_M_Roark_ch_11

The 12th-century Spanish-Arab philosopher Averroes is the best known of the Arabic scholars who studied and commented on Aristotle. Pity and love are to be considered in the same light. While a natural law theorist might downplay the importance of derivationist knowledge of the natural law, it is hard to see how a consistent natural law theorist could entirely reject the possibility of such knowledge, given the view that we can provide a substantial account of how the human good is grounded in nature: for to show that the human good is grounded in nature is to show that human nature explains why certain things are goods, and it is hard to see how one could affirm that claim while entirely rejecting the possibility of derivationist knowledge of the human good see Murphy 2001, pp.

3.6: A Treatise of Human Nature (David Hume)

He claims that the A-series is more fundamental than the B-series because only the A-series can account for change NE §317 and goes on to demonstrate that the A-series and the B-series contradict each other in the sense that they belong together though they are incompatible cf.
