Euclid and His Modern Rivals/Argument of Drama

The first point to settle is whether, for purposes of teaching and examining, you desire to have one fixed logical sequence of Propositions, or would allow the use of conflicting sequences, so that one candidate in an examination might use X to prove J, and another use Y to prove X--or even that the same candidate might offer both proofs, thus 'arguing in a circle. Their 'standard sequence' would be fitly replaced by a 'standard genealogy.
