

Making sense - a new rhetorical reader

Bedford/St. Martins - Making Sense

Description: -

-

Zawadzkie (Poland)

Lincoln, Abraham, 1809-1865 -- Poetry.

France -- Rural conditions -- Congresses.

Germany -- Rural conditions -- Congresses.

France -- Population -- History -- Congresses.

Germany -- Population -- History -- Congresses.

Urbanization -- France -- History -- Congresses.

Urbanization -- Germany -- History -- Congresses.

World politics -- 1975-1985.

Nuclear warfare.

Report writing -- Problems, exercises, etc.

English language -- Rhetoric -- Problems, exercises, etc.

College readers, Making sense - a new rhetorical reader

- Making sense - a new rhetorical reader

Notes: Includes bibliographical references (p. 672-675).

This edition was published in 2002

Filesize: 30.97 MB

Tags: #Making #Sense

9780312463830

The skillful propagandist stirs and coaches these internal persuaders. Do you approach problems with an open mind, a respect for truth, and an inquiring attitude? Rhetorical strategies, or devices as they are generally called, are words or word phrases that are used to convey meaning, provoke a response from a listener or reader and to persuade during communication. While we know cats and dogs are not literally falling from the sky, we use general phrases like this to describe, convey or sway someone to see the perspective we present. Read more: Commonly used rhetorical strategies. The following list includes some commonly used rhetorical devices, as well as examples to illustrate how the strategy can be used in speech or writing.

Arrangement and His Family: Kairos, Rhetorical Velocity, and Digital Delivery

Take this example for instance: They want a perfect house in a perfect neighborhood.

9780312463830

Rhetorical Appeals Rhetorical appeals refer to ethos, pathos, and logos. The following example from Shakespeare's King Lear showcases how you might use it in your communication.

Making Sense of Stories: A Rhetorical Approach to Narrative Analysis

At one stroke, this book bridges the conceptual gap between Jack Burnham's prophetic Beyond Modern Sculpture and the new kinds of knowledge required for better design. Thus, ethos comes down to trust. Consider some of these strategies the next time you are planning a speech, writing a letter or having a political debate with your neighbors.

Related Books

- Raising Cain - protecting the emotional life of boys
- Kants metaphysics and theory of science
- Páginas de Bohemia
- Touchdown - the development of propulsion controlled aircraft at NASA Dryden
- Hēvisi guruvarayā