Woman in Islam

But when relationships of a more serious nature developed, most of the time, they would end up in tremendous heartbreaks, then a process of healing followed in which the teenager hardened and lost this wonderful softness which would have been so critical in forming an enduring relationship in a marriage. It is our duty as Muslims to refresh people's memories and look to our Glorious Qur'an and our glorious past.

Whilst I am happy that our girls are shining in this manner, one issue that has arisen is that when it comes to deciding upon possible rishtas proposals of marriage some of our young Ahmadi women desire only to marry men who are educationally on par with them. According to Islam, the human being has the potentiality to ascend to the level of the Divine, knowledge of the law of the existence is the right of every human being. Islam prescribes modesty for both men and women in order to maintain a pure Islamic society.
