Articles covered national and international syndicalist news, social and political questions and strikes. In the more specifically anarchist movement, especially as it was represented at the Amsterdam Congress of 1907, Malatesta, in opposition to the syndicalist Monatte, obtained the support of the Congress majority for his theses against revolutionary syndicalism, which were especially hostile to the general strike: in his view, the idea that the workers would only have to fold their arms in order to make the bourgeoisie capitulate was absurd.
