China's Revolution, 1911

The magnitude of this Revolution cannot possibly be understood yet; but this volume is written in the hope that it will enable the student otherwise untutored to understand much that one absorbs in Chinese life. When the Revolution broke out, Edwin Dingle was residing in Hankow.

China's Revolution, 1911

On the very eve of the Revolution, a book written by Dingle was published simultaneously in England and America, which contains some strangely prophetic utterances, and will give the reader who has not made Chinese politics a study a general idea of the condition of the country when the Revolution made the scales drop from the eyes of her teeming millions. The narrative contains a good deal of new information touching upon revolutionism in China, and the events leading up to the present climax. Dingle was a personal friend of the leader of the Revolution, General Li Yuan Hung, and, by virtue of having all the time been in possession of much exclusive information from behind the political curtain, am probably equipped to write of the main doings of the Revolution in that area where its effects were most marked.
