Sverdlovsk : putevoditel'

The suspects attacked the police officers but were arrested and were booked under the names of Sayenko and Suprunyuk, but they were not the men currently on trial. He took on small construction work, repaired cars, wove baskets and cooked for his family. According to Sayenko, the tape constantly stops and restarts, showing the evidence obtained only after being picked up by investigators but never the actual moment of discovery.

Holdings: Tashkent :

Within an hour of the first murder, the two men attacked their next victim, Roman Tatarevich, as he slept on a bench near the first murder scene. Some photos show the boys drawing and other symbols with animal blood, and giving the. It did much to protect the community.

Dnepropetrovsk maniacs

The manhunt soon grew to encompass most local law enforcement, and reportedly over 2,000 investigators worked on the case.

Dnepropetrovsk (1974 edition)

Hanzha, who was not involved in the killings, was found guilty of robbery and sentenced to nine years in prison. Many were vulnerable to attack, including children, the elderly, vagrants, or people under the influence of alcohol. Journalist Michele Canale flew to Dnipro and interviewed a range of people involved in the case.
