These great buildings played an important role in the development of the , but they were less important for the subsequent development of Byzantine architecture. Nova Roma or Constantinople, as laid out in 324–330, expanded the urban armature of the old city of Byzantium westward to fill the peninsula between the Sea of Marmara and the Golden Horn, combining elements of Roman and Hellenistic city planning. Early Christians were not divorced from the materiality of the world, nor did they always remain distant from the Greek culture of the time or the rhetoric of Roman power.

Paul and the Panhellenion — CACS

Interweaving a grand historical narrative with cutting-edge climate science and genetic discoveries, Kyle Harper traces how the fate of Rome was decided not just by emperors, soldiers, and barbarians but also by volcanic eruptions, solar cycles, climate instability, and devastating viruses and bacteria.
