A general impression was deliberately being fostered, by the anti-Indian European leaders anxious to get rid of trade rivals, and by some of the officials of the Asiatic Department, seeking to divert attention from their own defects and malpractices, that widespread illicit Indian immigration had taken place, in which the Indian leaders had connived. Rajagopalachari, who became life-long friends of Gandhi. If the widespread denial of rights in the new Colony were not to spread to Natal, where most of the South African Indians had settled because of the immigration laws of the other three Colonies, immediate steps must be taken to stem the flow of legislation based on race, and of the administrative restrictions being threatened.
