Maybe Tomorrow

Smith certainly had a nice enough voice; particularly when he avoided using his falsetto I'd suggest staying away from the ballad 'Little Old Man' and Shepherd and Cartwright were seemingly talented guitarists, providing nice acoustic touches to tracks like 'Time Is Upon Us' and 'Napoleon'.

Sadly, Dave Smith died in 2011 after a short illness aged 61 years. Such ordinary Londoners are the ready victims of adventurer James Golspie and his glamorous daughter, Lena, who burst upon the city by ship determined to make a fortune.

And the story paints a graphic, highly claustrophobic, picture of life in London between the wars. The 1969 Wind in the Willows project was finally released on CD in 2009, digitally remastered with extra demo songs, on the Wooden Hill label.

Priestley Dramatised by: David Turner Designer: Austen Spriggs Producer: David Conroy Director: Paddy Russell Stanley: Christopher Cooper Benenden: Erik Chitty Mrs. Recorded in 1969 but unreleased at the time, the sole album by baroque harmony pop-psych group Angel Pavement finally emerged in vinyl-only format in 2003.

In the meantime Angels Pavement hit the London club circuit where they caught the attention of a Mexican hotel chain owner who offered them a chance to work in Mexico. It is not dramatic, the action such as it is is very low key, the characters are mundane and the subject it deals with office work is hardly going to be thrilling, but Priestley had a knack of really getting under the skin of his characters so you cared about the outcome.

Old Melodies ...: Angel Pavement

His days at the office were filled with important and exciting events. Paul Smith and Graham Harris both managed local bands for a short time, whilst Alfie Shepherd continued to write and record at home. There are just too many scenic jewels to mention from this 1930 novel.

Old Melodies ...: Angel Pavement

It is only available inside the BBC network. Anyone unfamiliar with Angel Pavement shouldn't feel too bad. There is a marvellous description of London in the grip of the run-up to Christmas, which applies absolutely to us now.
