

Examination of the evidence for the effectiveness of peer-mediated interventions intended to promote social interaction for students with special educational needs in inclusive school-based settings and its relevance to, and implications for, school-based occupational therapy research and practice.

Oxford Brookes University -

Description: -

-examination of the evidence for the effectiveness of peer-mediated interventions intended to promote social interaction for students with special educational needs in inclusive school-based settings and its relevance to, and implications for, school-based occupational therapy research and practice.

-examination of the evidence for the effectiveness of peer-mediated interventions intended to promote social interaction for students with special educational needs in inclusive school-based settings and its relevance to, and implications for, school-based occupational therapy research and practice.

Notes: Thesis (B.Sc.) - Oxford Brookes University, Oxford, 2002.
This edition was published in 2002

Filesize: 4.81 MB

Tags: #

..

.

...

...

...

.

Related Books

- Lao Zhuang ren xing si xiang de xian dai quan shi yu chong gou
- Nevada mustang
- Homo faber - work through the ages.
- Truyện ngắn chọn lọc \(1975-1990\)
- Scientists and the sea, 1650-1900 - a study of marine science.