The Bible Student's Life of Our Lord. The Grecian philosophy, particularly the systems of Plato and Aristotle, formed the natural basis for scientific theology; Grecian eloquence, for sacred oratory; Grecian art, for that of the Christian church. In dealing with heretics he conceives them as arraigned before a tribunal as defendants in a suit which the Church as plaintiff brings against them.

Who is the desired of all nations (Haggai 2:7)?

Irenaeus was content to believe that there was nothing in Scripture which did not serve some purpose of instruction and yet to acquiesce in failure to explain all passages. CHAPTER I

The conquest is dear, the progress slow and often interrupted, but steady and irresistible. Heathenism made a vigorous effort to regenerate itself, in order to hold its ground against the steady advance of Christianity.
