

Last days of Jesus - a poem

[s.n.] - Browse subject: Jesus Christ

Carve your name into the cross-- your grief is what He's bearing,
it's for you He sheds His blood,
it's for you He's caring.
Take a sharpened stone or stick and mark into the wood.
Do you have splinters? He has worse, tho' He's done naught but good for you. So why do you hold back and gaze upon Him sadly?
Carve your name into the cross:
He bears your burden gladly.
Carve your name into the rock
that no more hides the tomb.
Witness of the Lord's return
and gaze upon the room:
the garments folded, bright as though His blood had never poured upon the cloth; the earthen shelf
where His remains were stored, but now are gone. The Son of Man is risen from the dead.
Carve your name into the rock,
rejoice, and raise your head.

The day jesus died poem

The road they have chosen will be strait and narrow. One chose life; one chose death. Thus, the great tribulation was thought to have three phases: There would be a beginning 1914-1918 , the tribulation would be interrupted from 1918 onward , and it would conclude at Armageddon.

Therefore, we have good reason for continuing to offer as many people as possible the opportunity to listen to and respond to the Kingdom message. While we have seen some showers of true Holy Spirit revival in the past century they have not come anywhere near the glory we see prophesied for the genuine End-Time Revival as we see it outlined for us in the Holy Scriptures.
