Two other plays, Grace, by Ignace Cornelissen Belgium and Hitler's Childhood by Niklas Radstrom Sweden will also form part of an autumn tour and accompanying activities. Director Darshan Naik admits that he has adhered to the written text absolutely. Maybe we are tied to this hatred forever.

Mirad, A Boy From Bosnia Quotes by Ad De Bont

He is young. He has his whole life before him. Other actors, fresh from tours in Holland, reported stunning responses from young people, not only because of the story's topicality, but also because the play intensifies and individualizes passages to adulthood. Although a war drama, this is not a bang, bang radio drama feature but a deeply moving account of how individuals can be caught up in events beyond their control.

It tells of a representative few who looked into the mouth of the monster; of the religious persecution of Muslim atheists; of the trauma of pregnancy after rape; of friendly neighbours turned torturers. The story and the language are so strong, according to Jeremy Irons in his subsequent address to the audience, that anyone could perform the play and it would be moving. Children, it was felt, can and should address the issues involved in a language that is their own.
