Etruscan language

An extensive lexicon compiled from other lexicon sites. Few Etruscan words entered , but the names of at least two of the tribes — Ramnes and Luceres — seem to be Etruscan. On the other hand, many inscriptions are highly abbreviated and often casually formed, so the identification of individual letters is sometimes difficult.

Etruscan language

A 2019 genetic study published in the journal analyzed the remains of eleven individuals from the areas around Rome, of which four were Etruscan individuals, one buried in from the Villanovan era 900-800 BC and three buried in La Mattonara Necropolis near from the Orientalizing period 700-600 BC.
