Dante Gabriel Rossetti and Algernon Charles Swinburne

He was a widely read and accomplished man, tall of stature and handsome in appearance, warm-hearted and good-natured, of genial manners, with a wide circle of literary and artistic friends. A Poem, Burns Centenary Club Edinburgh, 1896.

The Correspondence of James McNeill Whistler :: People Search

Rossetti excels that of any English poet of our day. When one realizes, for example, that the book's lovely blue and cream endpapers reproduce the design of a wallpaper that DGR's father had brought with him from Italy to England, no feature of the volume seems to stand beyond the author's deliberated and artful purposes.

Algernon Charles Swinburne

From Menton, Swinburne travelled to Italy, where he journeyed extensively. But both his pictorial faculty and his intellectual force were tempered by a strain of mysticism, for which he has been charged with obscurity by hard-headed and dull-witted readers. Bookplate of Francis Hay Rawlins, Eton Master Vice-Provost in 1916 and published editor.
