

Princeton University Library Latin American microfilm collection.

Princeton University Library - Primary Sources: Microfilm Collections at DePaul

Description: -

-

Indians of South America -- Ecuador.Princeton University Library
Latin American microfilm collection.

-Princeton University Library Latin American microfilm collection.

Notes: Texts in Spanish.

This edition was published in 2002

Filesize: 62.92 MB

Tags: #Princeton #University #Library #Catalog

PLAS

Types of primary materials collected include pamphlets, non-commercially produced and distributed serials, flyers, posters, working papers, government publications, and other non-traditional formats. A complete list of collections appears in the Guide to the Princeton University Latin American Microfilm Collection Wilmington, DE: Scholarly Resources, 1993 and subsequent supplements. Many of the collections' finding aids are available online.

Collection

Intensive collecting in this area continues to this date.

Princeton University Latin Ameri

Most of the documentation in the collections was produced after the mid 1960s by Latin American nongovernmental organizations of all types, interest groups, political parties, research institutes, and government agencies. Some particularly well-documented topics are grassroots organizing, human rights, electoral politics, indigenous issues, women and gender issues, youth, the environment, health, education, and religion. Original print materials have been preserved in many cases.

Princeton University Latin Ameri

General information on countries and international organizations including the OAS and UN. Reference books do not circulate and, if used outside of the reference area, must be returned to the reference reshelving cart when the patron leaves the library. She sought to document some of the major political developments of the period, including the rise to power of military dictatorships, coup d'états, the institutionalization of the Cuban Revolution, and the popular responses to those developments.

Primary Sources: Microfilm Collections at DePaul

Most of the documentation in the collections was produced after the mid 1960s by Latin American nongovernmental organizations of all types, interest groups, political parties, research institutes, and government agencies.

What's in this Guide

Over the years, materials have been grouped and organized by country or region, and by topic or subject area.

Princeton University Library Catalog

Regueiro Guide Location: JPL3rd Floor Stacks PQ6217. She sought to document some of the major political developments of the period, including the rise to power of military dictatorships, coup d'états, the institutionalization of the Cuban Revolution, and the popular responses to those developments. Over the years, materials have been grouped and organized by country or region, and by topic or subject area.

Related Books

- Bronzestatue des Zeus von Dodona.
- Social work with families - readings in social work
- 58th Virginia Infantry
- Ahkām idhn al-insān fi al-fiqh al-Islāmī
- Deutsche Baukunst der Renaissance.