In the month after that case, asylum claims from Zimbabwe rose 50 per cent.

Health

Because we care, rightly, about people's civil liberties, we have, traditionally, set our face against summary powers; against changing the burden of proof in fighting crime; against curbing any of the procedures and rights used by defence lawyers; against sending people back to potentially dangerous countries; against any abrogation of the normal, full legal process. Let me give an even more pointed example.

Prime minister's speech on criminal justice reform

But many of the same principles apply to the CJS. The political right believed the mirror-image fallacy. Information on treatment program effectiveness on reducing relapse.
