Catholic Harbor of Faith and Morals

Since that time the Pope is regarded by orthodox Romanists as the organ of infallibility, and all his official decisions on matters of faith and morals must be accepted as final, without needing the sanction of an Œcumenical council. For this they were attempting who have recently introduced the detestable novelty that in him there is but one will and one operation, renewing the malignancy of , , Eutyches and Severus. Honorius's name was found in the Roman copy of the Acts.
