How Hackers Violate Privacy and Security of the Smart Home

In the Stack or at least in the version of it dreamed up by salesmen for the Internet of Things , everything must have a location in the network, a link to which it can be connected to other persons and things.

About Visual Hacking

While the TV with its footprint reminds us of its presence, in our houses a plethora of other smart objects of small size may still represent a serious threat to the safety of our homes.

10 Online Privacy Facts That May Surprise You

Conveyed by a Trojan that was signed with a valid Apple developer certificate, the hack phished for credentials by throwing up a full-screen alert claiming that there's an essential OS X update waiting to be installed. Only your direct connections -- one degree away -- can see your list of connections.
